Dear Friends!

I am Valentina Ocheretenko.

I have been living with diabetes, my daughter's diabetes for 45 years.

Since HER 2.

Every day, LIKE about million Ukrainians with diabetes she is facing the reality of making countless decisions that affect their lives as well

AS ALL OF YOU ALLOVER THE EUROPE.

Every decision in a day is examined by diabetes.

Managing diabetes is a daily challenge that demands resilience.

IN TIMES OF WAR, THE PRESSURE DOUBLES!

When you hear an air raid alert...

look up in the sky during the day time or go down to a bomb shelter in the middle of the night.

7 October: Air raid alert in Kyiv lasting 12 hours. and 11 min.

8 October: Air raid alert in Odesa lasting 04 hrs. and 32 min.

So for almost 1,000 days. Your life should be constantly focused an acute awareness of the external world.-

PROBLEMS ARE NEW OPPORTUNITIES

Is it possible to type “hApenneSS”

using only the letters ‘a’, ‘s’, ‘s’?

No, it is not.

BUT

- Problems are new opportunities
- It's important to realize: You're not alone!
- Either we go together, or we each have our own road to nowhere

“Factors contributing to the deterioration of the quality of diabetes care in war conditions”

Despite the fact that the provision of insulin is optimally solved thanks to the efforts of the state and quite clear work of the reimbursement system and electronic prescriptions, there are much more problems that are extremely difficult to solve without the assistance of donors.

Factors contributing to the deterioration of the quality of diabetes care in the context of the war:

- Mass displacement of vulnerable populations and medical workers as well
- Reorientation of health care providers towards trauma-informed assistance
- Disruption of communication between patients and medical teams
- Constant stress in the bombarded landscape
- Inaccessibility of education in Diabetes Schools. As a result increasing in severe complications and mortality rates.

What can be done?
