

Anastasia Babileva

I was born in the Republic of Moldova in 1992. I have been living with Type 1 diabetes since 2005. I work as an analytical pharmacist. Currently I am a PhD student in Biology (Physiology). I am interested in human health and social work activities. What drives me to be part of the YOURAH network is that it is an international expert hub on youth issues, especially in diabetes. It is a network that promotes advocacy in the field of diabetes and making a bigger impact to improve health systems. We are small, but we make big things through the mentoring system. We spread best practice throughout Europe by developing projects that may not be cutting-edge, but that could fill gaps at a European level.
